The Rabbi's Study
D'var Torah
Neighbor Night
February 18, 2011

Over the last three years, I have chosen a word from the weekly

Torah reading on which to focus for a congregational discussion of its meaning. The word that I chose this week, KAVOD, is not in the section from which I will be reading tonight from the Torah, but in the verses just preceding it. KAVOD is a word that is usually translated as glory or honor. In the most modern translation, "glory" becomes presence. Here is the section from the end of Exodus Chapter 33: "Moses said to the Eternal, 'O let me behold K'VODECHA – Your presence!' And God answered, "I will make all My goodness pass before you, and I will proclaim the name Eternal (God's 4 letter name YUD HAY VAV HAY) and the grace that I grant and the compassion that I show...but you cannot see my face, for a human being may not see me and live." God then explained to Moses that he would be put in the cleft of a rock as the divine presence passed by, so that Moses would see only God's back.

In the various Torah commentaries which I consult on the possible meanings of words and phrases, the best explanation I found for the use of KAVOD in this verse came from Robert Alter's translation of the Torah. Alter explained: "We are not likely to recover precisely what the key term KAVOD – glory, honor, divine presence, and, very literally, 'weightiness' – conveyed to the ancient Hebrew imagination. In any case, Moses, who first fearfully encountered God in the fire in the bush, is now ready and eager to be granted a full-scale epiphany, a frontal revelation of the look and character of this divinity that has been speaking to him from within a pillar of the cloud."

Of course, God didn't offer to show Moses the divine face or the divine glory. Instead, God told Moses that he would be allowed to see and sense all of God's goodness – KOL TUVI – defined by the grace and compassion that God would show to Moses and, in turn, to all of humanity.

The rest of the definition of divine goodness – and even God's KAVOD – glory and presence – appeared in God's declaration to Moses in the verses I am about to chant from the Torah. Specifically, God's glory and goodness were characterized by mercy, compassion, grace – where grace means a measure of unconditional love and loyalty – patience in the face of possible anger, overflowing kindness, faithfulness, and forgiveness. This was what was revealed to Moses, and, in turn, to the Israelite people after they had forced Aaron the priest, Moses' brother, to fashion a golden calf for them to worship as if it were God. Moses' "absence" while he was atop Mount Sinai, like a parent leaving an adolescent child at home alone, had caused the people to lose faith and hope. The revelation to Moses of divine goodness – KOL TUVI - was meant as a reassurance to the people that God, who cannot be seen in a physical way, is still always present.

For our lives, the an important lesson that we can learn from this passage is that we can find footprints or traces of God when we and the people around us put into practice the essence of God's glory and goodness: mercy, compassion, grace, kindness, patience, loyalty and forgiveness. I am sure that we would all admit that it is next to impossible to exhibit all of those qualities at once, because, of course, we are only human. Yet, the more of those qualities we do practice at once, the better we become as individuals and as a human family. Striving to emulate those divine attributes enables us to create a culture and community of KAVOD, where we truly honor each other by our presence and by giving the best of ourselves. So may we do each day of our lives.

L'shalom,
Rabbi Larry

Message from our President, Carole Krassner

Dear Friends,

“Everyone can be great because everyone can serve”.

Recently, I visited a local family owned nursery/gardening center. I desperately had the need to inhale the smell of flowers and that greenhouse smell. I think it is going to be quite a long time before I even get a glimpse of my lawn. I enjoy gardening and every year I plant different varieties of Morning Glories. This particular day, I was looking for Grandpa Ott’s Morning Glory seeds after reading in my gardening magazine that they reseed and grow back every year. Believe it or not, we spring the clocks ahead in just two and half weeks on March 13th. Hint, hint, Mother Nature, maybe we can soon see some signs of Spring.

Keeping the annual changing of the seasons in mind, do we want to be sure that we have our temple building year after year? Very shortly, you will all be receiving in the mail a postcard featuring a photo of our beautiful Temple Israel building. There will be a choice of three dates inviting members of our congregation as well as all members of the Jewish Community to attend a meeting. The dates of those meetings are March 13th, March 17th and March 24th. Our hope is that this will give everyone an opportunity to attend at a date that is convenient for them.

At these meetings there will be a presentation with a plan as to how we can continue to function during this financially challenging time. Everyone who attends will have an opportunity to offer suggestions and make comments. We know that you will bring a positive attitude. This responsibility rests not just with the Board of Trustees, but upon all of us.

Meanwhile, we look forward to Shabbat Across America at Temple this coming Friday evening. We encourage everyone to attend and invite an unaffiliated Jewish person to attend as well. We also look forward to another “Roving Havdalah” service at the home of Leslie and Sam Kirshman on March 12th. We will be celebrating Purim here at Temple on March 23rd with our annual Purim Megillah Reading and Carnival. We will also have a special event on Saturday evening, March 19 (see inside the Keshet for more information).

Other upcoming events that we not only encourage you to attend, but to participate in as well are the Art Auction to be held on April 16th and our second annual Nosharama on May 15th. Please consider taking out an ad to congratulate and thank our hard working Auction Committee. Further information provided in the Keshet. Please don’t forget our ongoing Mitzvah project providing for the Dover Food Pantry.

As always, please feel free to contact me with any concerns or suggestions. From our Friday night prayer book, Mishkan T’filah- “May it be Your will, our God and God of our Ancestors that you lead us in peace and help us to reach our destination safely, joyfully and peacefully.”

*L’shalom,
Carole*
